Mr. D. M. Duggan, in his remarks before the committee, said that the organization did not content himself with merely offering criticism of the government, but that it was a body that has lost the entire confidence of the people, and that he believed may prove the cause of the country's ruin. He said that the cause of the city's affairs, due to excessive taxation.

Mr. Duggan said he restored confidence by keeping expenditure within the means of the city, by encouraging people to build and save, and by encouraging the business community with each citizen to do his duty.

The candidate reported to the accreditation board that the quality of the education in the province was "adequate." Mitchell, in his annual statement, said that the province was "adequately prepared" to handle the influx of refugees, considering who might be in power when he made his report. The speaker said that the province's "resources" should be limited to the ability to handle the influx of refugees, and that the situation in a nutshell. It was evident that there had been extensive work which should have been avoided.

Considered Crown Colonies, the most serious problem was the lack of funds. He heard only valid argument advanced during the western provinces equalization conference in Ottawa, Canada. In the matter of ownership and control of the province, he said that the province was not in a position to keep the one that the provinces when first established, could not be maintained. He said that the province should be maintained in the same manner as they established government and control of the province. He said that the provinces were capable of maintaining a well-run government.

Test of Statedhood Survived

Taxation, Not Confiscation.—Mr. A. B. C. Allen, president of the Association, introduced J. T. J. Collins, who also spoke in favor of the plan of creating a new province. Mr. Collins, in his views, said, remarking that out of the 100,000 people in the island only 10 per cent. own 4,000 acres of land, and the rest are poor. With an ever-increasing circle of poverty, the people are now crying out for relief from those upon whom

"I might say," continued the attorney general, "that if we cannot get redress from parliament in the matter of our resources, we intend to test our legal rights in the courts. I am of the opinion that the parliament of Great Britain and Ireland when establishing Canada as a self-governing country intended

Recently Commissioner Armstrong made an order increasing the pay of the day men in the Drumheller and Lethbridge mines by $1.18 a day. This increase did not affect the contract miners. The order did not apply to the Edmonton mines and no action was taken by the mine op-

If the increase were granted, it would have to be added to the price of coal. This would add to the burden of the Edmonton householder. But it might also tend to curtail the use therefore decrease the operation of the mines. At present the day men are getting from $1.75 to $1.95 per day. This is considered to be a fair going rate for pot handled miners under the present circumstances. Some of the contract miners are in sympathy with the demands of the day men and some are not, but in any case they can only work when the day men are at work to handle the coal as they mine it. It seems to be a case in which the union has no work to take, or is attempting to take control of the situation, to the detriment of all other parties concerned.

JUDGES DECIDE MINIMUM WAGES

Metropolitan Team Get Decision

in Well Contested Debate

An interesting debate was given between the Metropolitan and Morning Advertiser last week. McDougall Epworth was the last speaker before a large attendance in the hall of the Metropolitan church. The address was well received throughout, especially the addresses of Messrs. Bryce, Child and Herby. The subject of the discussion was: Resolved that minimum wage for all wage-earners be enacted by parliament.

The debate was of excellent merit and was given particular attention. The judges of the affirmative were C. E. Race, and A. F. Bwing, commended highly upon the debate but decided that the affirmative did not substantiate their arguments sufficiently.

An interesting debate was given between the Metropolitan and Morning Advertiser last week. McDougall Epworth was the last speaker before a large attendance in the hall of the Metropolitan church. The address was well received throughout, especially the addresses of Messrs. Bryce, Child and Herby. The subject of the discussion was: Resolved that minimum wage for all wage-earners be enacted by parliament.

The debate was of excellent merit and was given particular attention. The judges of the affirmative were C. E. Race, and A. F. Bwing, commended highly upon the debate but decided that the affirmative did not substantiate their arguments sufficiently.

The Affirmative Case
F. Hart, the leader of the affirmative, painted a very dark picture of the state of poverty that existed among the workingmen as a result of inadequate pay. Legislation should be enacted, he argued, in order to bring the standards of living to the level of the general public. Poverty now exists in a great many places will be eliminated. In his rebuttal he maintained that organized workers were strongly in favor of a minimum wage resolution.

Mr. Lamont, the second speaker on the affirmative, maintained, for the sake of society the minimum wage for the women workers should be passed by parliament. He remarked that it would promote the general welfare of the state because it would tend to protect women workers. Society demands that the only effective manner in which this individual concerned may meet this demand is by granting each worker the right to a minimum wage and also insure the right of life which he claimed was a fundamental right. The cause of the minimum wage where it had been in force and how it might be applied to the cause of the minimum wage legislation. The cause, as he said, was not always a condition of money. In the majority of cases it is the conditions of the work which are the cause of the cause to strike. He read a letter from Mackenzie King, one of our great statesmen, in which he said that labor on the American continent which stated that adequate wages are beneficial alike to labor, capital, and the community. He said that if they lead to a maximum of effect and a minimum of waste.

The meaning of minimum wage or living wage, is that wages are the incentive to work, and must be adequate to produce it. Where men are forced below a standard which constitutes a living wage, labor while apparently cheap, is really dear, because sweated. Labor is either unwilling or without capacity.

Peace work destroys the worker's incentive, as it inevitably results in a lessening of productivity. It deals a fatal blow at efficiency and increases the cost of production and justifies the prejudice in the part of labor against the method of remuneration.

The Case For the Negative

Mr. J. F. Lock, the first speaker on the negative, argued that the conditions which exist at the present time do not warrant legislation of any kind to establish a minimum wage.

The sole object of labor organization has been to bring about better conditions for wage earners, and it brings about those conditions in a manner that would suit each individual case. There was never a period in the history of the world where labor conditions were quite as good as they are now, and there is every indication that conditions will improve from year to year.

Labor is the strongest organization in the world today and it is due mainly to the organization of labor that we

That labor conditions are far better than they ever have been before is amply emphasized by the fact that today skilled workers, are drawing more pay than they ever did before in relation to the cost of living, have shorter hours of work, and are working under more sanitary and better conditions. Child labor has been almost abolished and sweat shops are now history. This has all been brought about by the organization of labor and effective bargaining between em- and employer, and not by any legislation. A minimum wage is almost in operation in every instance

Minimum or Maximum?
Edward Brice, the second speaker of the Metropolitan team contended that there was no necessity for any legislation to bring about an increased wage. The question is, he pointed out, would the legislation raise the wages.

Legislators, he argued, would not necessarily conduct themselves in the of the majority and knowing the desires of the majority of the voters, he will govern his actions accordingly." This the speaker pointed out, had been the case in Australia.
